WID DESCRIPT, 1 1 TEMPEST 11, 1875 ROBION, OF INDIANA. The Cincinnati Enquirer says truth fully and forcibly that he is the same sed Metten-vergelin, frateful, full of posjudice and devoted to the war. He in the Republican Bourbon. When La goes out stumping, he carries a shull and cross-bones in his carpetrag. He made a speech to the people of Urbatia, Onto, on Saturday last, in which he attempted to revive the doctrine of secissinn, dead beyond the reach of resurrection, and place that in issue in the Ohio canvass. The representative of that party that marches armies into legislative balls and takes possession thereof in time of peace denounces the Demo cratic party as an "enemy of the nation." While the southern States. have been plundered and are starving, legislatures turned out at the point of the bayonet, governors elected in Washlugion, Senator Morton dares to speak of "reconstruction." While there are not six sane men in the United States who desire the restoration of slavery, Morton charges that "the great mass of former slaveholders still wish for the return of that institution, and that the Democratic party in 1875 is practically a slave-holding surgents. party." Of coarse he falsifies here. We dislike to call things by their right offensive falsehoods have provoked re- composition. plies that overstep the bounds of courteey. He maists that it is important in the canvass in Ohio "to review the his- | dred thousand, tory, the principles," of the Democratic party, and his review covers but onefifth of the life of the party, and that is made up nine-tenths of falsehood and one-tenth of truth, of which truth we are not ashamed. Indeed, so much of his speech as is not made up of waiving the bloody shirt is made up of falsehood, rave a few humiliating confessions concerning his position upon the currency. "The bloody shirt and lying! fitly and fairly describes this speech of Morion's, whom the war made, who jumped to the front by lying, decelt and chicane, and who has held his place only because the people of Indiana have had no opportunity through their legis- vious gubernatorial election. lature of consigning him to the retiracy he deserves. A deliberate liar and faisifier of the people of the south, he seserves the execration of all men who love peace and who desire to see the States restored to the amity which is labored for nowhere so earnestly as in the south which Morton reviles. ideas. It was not "the gladiators cry," nor was it "in the arena," or "face to face with the Roman populace." The same view enters into the great picture by Gerome of "The Giadiators," in which similar words are given as the abject of the picture, and descriptive of s scene in the Roman amphitheater. Indeed, we are inclined to think that Longfellow caught the fancy from this mpressive painting rather than from he ancient writers who have recorded he salutation. The real scene as described by Tacitus and Suetonius, and al-o, about a hundred years later, by the great writer, Dion Cassius, was not a gladiatorial combat in the Roman arena, Texas cattle to be driven into Nevada but a sea fight, and ne ordinary one, either, but the great Naumachia, ex-hibited by the emperor on the rest of the lynchers. and the naval fight itself, makes no mention whatever of the incident of the salutation, a fact which has led some modern critics to discredit the incident altogether as a sensational fletion of other writers. The combatants were the naumachiari - the word used by Tacitus-and as mentioned both by Sectonius and Dion, were condemned criminals; and they were to fight, just as in gladistorial combats, until one of the parties were killed, unless saved by the is a slight difference in the form of selu-tation as given by Suctonius and by Dion Cassius. The former puts the verb in the third person, morituri te salutant, the form which is used by Gerome in his ploture; while the latter has the third person, the Latin translation of which, morituri salutamus, is the orm used by Longfellow in his poem. But another and more important difference is found in the two narratives. The Latin writer says that the emperor replied to the Ave of the com-batauts in the words Avets vos; and that they, interpreting this salutation as granting them indulgence and exemption from fighting, first refused to Wm. We may hore add that we have just seen in the Academy for July 10th, periodical, in which that eminent writer ives a full review of the account of the Naumachia given by Tacitus, and com-pages it in all its defails with the narraives of Suctonius and Dion Carsins real view when he represents him as saying that Suctonius is wholly silent about the occurrence of the salutation and also as ascribing the Amte vos to Dion Cassius, whereas that expression is pecu ltar to the narrative of Sucionius, which substitute other words for this salutaion, but certainly the Greek words for Avete vos do not occur at all in Dior Cassius. We had no intention of inflicting these details upon our readers when we began to write this article; but, per-

The Boston Post says the earthquake shock that was felt in portions of Connecticut and Massachusetts on the morning of the twenty-eighth of July last, was, on the whole, quite lively and animative for the north temperate zone, and especially the eastern portion of it.
